

FIRST DYNOCHEM GLOBAL USER GROUP MEETING AN OUTSTANDING SUCCESS

Meeting featured 17 industry presentations

Dublin, Ireland, May 28, 2007 -- DynoChem Inc., the North American subsidiary of Dublin-based PFD and a leading provider of process development software for the pharmaceutical and chemical industries, today announced that its first global user meeting had been attended by 22 major producers of pharmaceuticals or fine chemicals.

Over 70 industry representatives attended the meeting which comprised two full days and 17 industry presentations in Philadelphia from May 15-16. Each session discussed how users had applied DynoChem software to improve productivity in the development and scale-up of chemical processes.

The prize for best presentation was awarded to Tom Vickery of Merck & Co., for his work on safety aspects of scale-up of chemical reactions.

Several papers featured PAT applications alongside lab and plant instrumentation as well as examples of a Quality by Design (QbD) approach. Users stated that a 'first-principles' tool such as DynoChem 3 was essential to complement statistical multivariate analysis tools in the QbD framework.

A user-led session discussed how to successfully roll DynoChem out to development and manufacturing groups and how to measure that success.

Registered members of www.scale-up.com can download the presentations from www.scale-up.com/pubs.html. Applications for membership may be made at www.scale-up.com/user.html.
